

Hatfield Philips launches European property debt research

Date: 8 April 2011

Category: Research

Hatfield Philips International (HPI) has announced it is conducting new research into the European commercial real estate market. The independent primary and special servicer is inviting commercial real estate professionals to take part in an online survey at www.hatfieldphilips.com.

The survey aims to take a snapshot of the commercial real estate market across Europe in 2011, as well as provide an insight into how people think the market might change over the next five years.

Clarence Dixon, managing director, Hatfield Philips: 'The research seeks to gain insight into the commercial real estate market, and how it will evolve over the coming 12 months and beyond. We would like to invite as many individuals as possible to take part so that we can get a clear understanding of the sectors view of the market.'

A full survey report will be available for all respondents, along with the chance to win an iPad2.
